Preface

This volume will provide a short-title list of the 3,000 tracts (some of them duplicates) in the first one hundred and eighty-eight volumes in the Archives of the Diocese of Connecticut, housed in the Trinity College Library in Hartford. Their value to the student of the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries cannot be overemphasized, since the political, literary and apologetical issues of those periods were largely debated and won in pamphlet warfare. The Church historian, moreover, is so much indebted to early leaflets for many basic facts that an analyzed collection of this kind must invariably stimulate research in the department of parochial origins and growth.

The original plan called for a terminal cross-reference index of parishes, persons, issues and themes, but lack of opportunity made that part of the project impossible at this time. (It may, of course, be undertaken later on as a separate venture.) The compilation as it stands is divisible into three sections:

		Pages
I.	The Main Index, arranged by authors or principal subjects	3-156.
II.	Addenda to the Main Index	157-158.
III.	Index of Titles for which authorship could not be established	158-169.

I am indebted to my Trinity College students for help with the task at various stages. Because for them and for me it was only a part-time enterprise, extending over many months, I cannot assume that it is completely free from inaccuracies or rigidly uniform in format, but I offer it to the public as a key to a rich reference collection, a part of which may be unique or exceptionally rare.

The volume numbers in which a particular tract may be found will appear after the imprint date or at the end of the listing. The Archives of the Diocese will be glad to assist scholars in putting the collection to use--either by welcoming them to the library itself or by supplying, at reasonable rates, photostatic copies of what may most interest them.
